

Around Chania

Zoom in to about 300 or 400% to view pictures better
(The 'dynamic' Zoom is a good tool to use)

Sunset whilst dining at a Taverna. (HAR)
Beach - Walking from the hotel to the Town. (LEN)
Marina - Walking from the hotel to the Town. (HAR)
Nearing the Town for dinner at Sunset. (HAR)
View from another Taverna in the Harbour. (HAR)

Group with their new maps outside Hotel. (LEN)
Group in Cathedral (Greek Orthodox Church) Square. (LEN)
Members in the Market. (LEN)
Kitchen of a Taverna. (HAR)

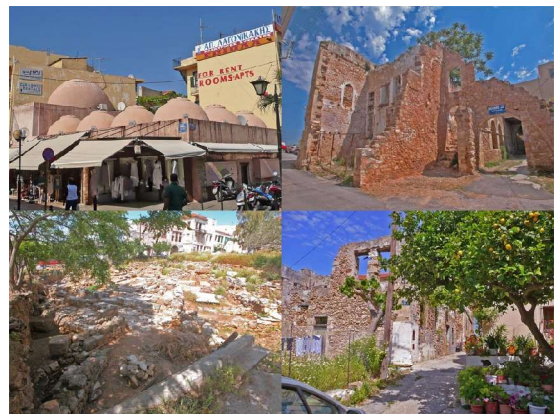

Ahmet Aga Minaret, in Hatzimichaly Daliani Street. (LEN)
Ecumenical Patriarch Athenagoras, in Cathedral Square. (KEI)
Catholic Church, outside, – accessed by alley - 46 Halidon Street. (HAR)
Belfry – Cathedral, Greek Orthodox, Virgin of the three Martyrs. (HAR)
Cathedral - Inside. (HAR)
Catholic Church of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, Inside. (HAR)

Just a few of the many Streets of Chania.
(LEN) (HAR) (LEN)
(KEI) (KEI) (KEI)

Dining out at a Taverna in Chania. (HAR)
At a another Taverna in Chania. (HAR)
Taverna in an alley opposite the Cathedral ... (RAY)
... and further down the alley, with more romantic tables. (HAR)

Once a Turkish Bath, in Halidon Street – opposite Catholic Church. (HAR)
Dominican Convent of Santa Maria Dei Miracoli. (HAR)
Minoan Excavations of Houses of Kydonia ... (HAR)
... and adjacent, the Domenican Catholic cathedral of Santa Maria plus the ubiquitous orange tree. (HAR)

Chania is a very pleasant place and more time there would have been very welcomed. They have numerous tavernas to choose from for a drink or a meal and the old town is nicely compact for walking around and has quite a history and cultural identity caused by previous invading rulers. A guide book is really useful, particularly "Fenny's Hania (ISBN: 0-9540296-0-7)" if you can get a copy.

The Photographer's name is in brackets:

HAR – Harry Hawkins; KEI – Keith Miller; LEN – Len Banister; RAY – Ray Latham